Boeyer Lake and Woodland Sold For $40,000

The beautiful Boeyer lake and woodland, the show place of Tinley Park, owned by John Boeyer, has been sold to Hans and Askel Nielsen of Chicago according to a deed filed with Cook County Recorder Edward J. Kaindl.

Involved in the transaction is a tract of land 1,551 by 1,650 feet adjoining the Rock Island railroad west of Springfield avenue and extending north to 167th street.

Revenue stamps on the deed indicate a consideration of $40,000 was paid for the property, of which $10,000 was cash and $30,000 a purchase money mortgage at 4 per cent interest.

Mr. Boeyer, former manager of the International Harvester Co. in Germany and Russia before and during World War 1 acquired this property formerly known as the Schussler farm, some years ago and realizing the possibilities of making this woodland a real show place, he had it landscaped and planted a big variety of imported trees, shrubs and flowers. He had a well drilled and a big spring was struck resulting in an ever flowing well.

He had the channel of a small creek changed and proceeded to make an artificial lake, fed by the cold, pure water from the flowing well. He made a miniature island named "Pin Island" and also had many loads of sand hauled in and had the lake stocked with fish. Hundreds of people have been delighted to stand on the beach and throw crumbs of bread to the fish who come close up to the beach to fight to grab the crumbs in the water.

The lake is deep enough for good swimming and dive boards have been provided. Thousands of people have enjoyed this rustic spot. The beautiful woodland has been ideal for picnics and family outings.

Intriguing trails ramble thru the hilly sections of the tract and way up on a high hillside overlooking the lake is a huge granite boulder said to cover the grave of an Indian chief. The face of the boulder is covered with sweethearts initials and dates of months and years carved into the face of the rock.

This beauty spot of nature will forever remain as a living monument to Mr. Boeyer who transformed an ordinary farm piece of timberland into an ideal show place of which Tinley Park is justly proud.

ORLAND PTA ELECTS DELEGATES TO SOUTHWEST SUBURBAN COUNCIL

The Orland Park PTA met in the school library Thursday evening, October 11. Mrs. Florence Town, Mrs. Evelyn Frogner and Mrs. Evelyn Manning were elected as delegates to the Southwest Suburban Council. Announcement was made of the purchase of the silver service for the new Home Economics Unit. Miss McCann, instructor in music, announced the purchase of 33 records for the music library of the school with money provided by the special music fund of the PTA and played several of them for the entertainment of the members. It is hoped to add to this library which will fill an important place in the teaching of music appreciation to the students of the school.

Miss Tabor, instructor of Home Economics spoke very interestingly on the progress that is being made in the new unit and of her plans and hopes for it. She told how several pieces of furniture which were donated are being refurbished and upholstered; the work being done by the students themselves as part of their school manual training and art program. The girls of the sewing class will make the drapes and other decorations. She requested that any person having odd chairs which they would like to donate to contact either her or Supt. Kelly. There is also need for mirrors and lamps, the latter being wanted more for their wiring and fixtures which are now difficult to get. Discussion was held on the linen supply for the new unit and a committee consisting of Bertha Cleveland, Budget chairman and Delia Steinhagen and Louise Kramer are working out plans to give some sort of affair to raise funds to purchase these linens.

Membership chairman Gustie Hallinan announced a paid membership of 57 members. This is an excellent showing for so early in the year but in view of the fact that the PTA works in direct cooperation with and for the school, there should be at least a hundred school interested parents to help this work along. The membership fee is small, only 50 cents a year and it is hoped that before the next meeting, a considerable increase in membership will be had. Following the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess committee consisting of Mesdames Johnson, Frogner, Margolis, Steinhagen and Kramer.

TO HOLD FOOD AND BAKE SALE

Don't forget the Food and Bake Sale which will be held Saturday, Oct. 23 at 2 p.m. at Loeb Bros. Store. This sale is being sponsored by the Orland Park Woman's Club to raise money for the Service Men's Christmas boxes.

HEALTH MEASURE GIVEN O. K. AT SPECIAL MEETING

The Mokena Village Board at a special meeting held Tuesday night discussed and made alterations on a tentative draft of a new ordinance relative to prohibiting the sale of raw milk in the Mokena incorporated territory and requiring that all milk sold in the community must be pasteurized.

The ordinance was passed without opposition and after it is placed in legal form and published according to law, it will become effective. Local dairies now supplying Mokena with milk will be given a year's time in which to convert to pasteurization.

FRANKFORT LIONS TO HAVE LADIES NIGHT

The Frankfort Lions Club will entertain the ladies at Ladies Night the forepart of December. This will be in the nature of a Christmas exchange party.

EVERYTHING IN READINESS FOR COSTUME DANCE AT TINLEY PARK

Everything is in order and just waiting for you all to come Saturday night for our Costume Dance at 8 p.m. in the Tinley Park school auditorium. The women and young ladies of St. Geo. Parish have worked hard to make this event one you will long remember.

This is not just a dance, but one that you can come to and be your merriest. No doubt you have said at one time or another, "Gee, I wish I was young again, those young folks don't know how lucky they are." Well here is the chance.

If you have your own particular friends that you usually spend Saturday evenings with, get together your costumes and wait and see if you recognize each other. It is a regular "Guess Who" game.

Then there is a luncheon to be served by the ladies. There will be prizes for the funniest costume, so be sure to dress up.

The ladies and young folks of St. George Parish

TINLEY TO HAVE COMMUNITY PROGRAM

A large Community program will be held in the school Auditorium in Tinley on the evening of November 13. Representatives of all local organizations met in the school Wednesday evening to discuss plans for the entertainment. The evening is to climax National Education Week, November 7 to 13, and is sponsored by the Tinley Park School. The theme "Education for Victory" will be observed throughout the program. Each organization will portray some phase of its work by skit, pantomime music or discussion.

Throughout the week the School will hold Open House and parents are urged to see and hear their children at work. On Friday evening of that week the School will be open at 7 pm and an invitation is extended to parents to visit their child's classroom and meet his teacher, and see his work. Spirited Community singing will be a feature of the worthwhile program which will commence at 8:30 p.m.

ORLAND PARK CHURCH TO TAKE PART IN PENSION FUND DRIVE

At a meeting of the Orland Park Methodist church last Monday evening, plans for local participation in the coming drive to raise a million dollar Pension Fund for the Ministers of the Rock River Conference were discussed. Wm. T. Beagley will head the local committee with Thos. Cooper as Treasurer, and Mrs. Sherman S. Knox as publicity chairman. The other members of the committee are: Mrs. Geo. Gee Jr., Mrs. Thos. Cooper, John Loeb, Rev. H. E. Rompel, Dr. B. J. Rooth, Arch Kay, James Creer and Frank Sayers. It is planned to have some layman of the church speak on the coming drive at the Services of Oct. 24 and 31 and on Nov. 7 Rev. H. E. Rompel will officially launch the campaign.

Every member and friend of the church will be invited to give to this worthy cause and when this invitation comes to you, it is the hope of the committee that you will accept the opportunity it affords to pay tribute to those to whom we are greatly obligated.

Margaret Nichols owned some property in joint tenancy with Kitty Chatfield. When Kitty died it meant $200,000 to her. She explains the situation to her friend, Barry, an amateur detective. Elsa Chatfield had been disinherited at her Aunt Kitty's death, but is glad to be free of the restrictions imposed by her relative. Hutton Rogers, a detective, asks what Aunt Kitty died of, and is told an overdose of morphine, although the police hold the opinion that it was suicide. Barry arranges to go with Dwight and Margaret Nichols on a cruise to Mazatlan, Mexico, where Aunt Kitty's brother, Sam Chatfield, owns a rancho. On the yacht Orizaba he meets James Chesbro and George Rumble.

CHAPTER IV

"Oh, here you are," she said, an indefinable note of happiness in her voice. "Hello, everybody." She paused in the doorway, this lady with the almost golden hair and the levellest of gray eyes.

It was impossible not to contrast this new, this mid-April Elsa with the Elsa of the preceding autumn. On that memorable night when I had driven her to town in her working girl suit and carrying an overnight bag with just pajamas, because she had to have something, she had been like a high-strung, nervous colt at the barrier. Tonight a calm almost philosophic in its aspect had come upon her. No longer was the race so hot, the urge to be off so compelling. I realized, of course, that she experienced a sense of arrival. The notoriety of her caricatures had sobered her.

"Now, good-bye, Barry," she said, holding out her hand. "And a delightful trip in the Orizaba with Dwight and Margaret."

"Good-bye, Elsa. I'm sorry you're not joining us."

"I am too; but there is this work I can't put off. Please give my love to Papa and Berta; you'll see them at Mazatlan, of course."

Hutton Rogers and I walked back together to the yacht; Dwight and Margaret had gone on ahead. The last guest had departed and we sailed in half an hour.

"A remarkable girl, isn't she?" Rogers said, referring to Elsa.

"Extraordinary, I think."

"You've never been able to get anything out of her about the baby, and what she knows about the murder of her Aunt Kitty?"

"No-o," I said hesitantly. "Look here, Rogers—"

"Yes, I know," he cut me off. "I'm aware that you've been working quietly on certain angles of the case—"

"I must be a hell of a detective," I said in disgust. "First Elsa accuses me of snooping, and now you."

"It's a very peculiar case," he observed thoughtfully. "Nothing is obvious in it. Officially it is tagged suicide. It ends there. There's nothing to go on but the nose of one fellow in Pasadena, the chap who smelled chloroform. He has really a remarkable sense of smell. I've tested him. He sticks to it that there was an odor of chloroform in the room. There was no evidence of it in the autopsy."

"You're satisfied she was murdered?"

"Of course. And I mean to help you get to the bottom of it."

We dropped anchor in the harbor at Mazatlan and the crew lowered the launch to the sparkling water of the bay where it floated lightly from the end of its boom awaiting our pleasure. However, now that we had arrived, there was no hurry to go ashore; we were in that land of manana where time does not press and nothing demands doing immediately. Dwight had come to fish, but, as we reminded him, there was tomorrow.

Of Mexico's many charms the one that most endears itself to me is that indifference to time; nothing needs doing now. At home, time rides me like the Old Man of the Sea; in Mexico I can relax.

"Anybody going ashore now?" inquired Margaret briskly, coming up from her stateroom.

"Yes, I'm going," responded Rogers. I decided to join them.

Two ragged boys in the idling crowd pushed forward as we started from the wharf up narrow, twisting streets. Enormous sombreros shadowed their dark faces in each of which gleamed a row of very white teeth. One carried a battered guitar, the other a ukulele. Strumming fingers began resolutely to play.

When they had finished, Margaret's hand dived swiftly into her purse and she held out a coin to the older boy. The latter backed away, shaking his head; the other thrust his ukulele and his free hand behind him.

"Muchas gracias, senora," said the boy with a sweeping bow, "pero no tomamos dinero." (We don't take money.)

Margaret continued to hold out the coin, and the boys backed farther away. There was a little expression of wonderment upon her face.

I think, however, that of all the unexpected things, the things that have taken me most by surprise in Mexico, none has equaled the sight which confronted us as we came out on the Street of the High Waves that morning of our first excursion ashore. Margaret saw it first, and stopped abruptly to stare as if she were seeing a ghost. Rogers had seen it too, and I found my eyes traveling with theirs to a figure standing on the sidewalk.

It was the pink shirt, the indecent pink and white check shirt which had the lush color of a ripe watermelon, that first claimed our attention. I noted the brown slacks. The incredible sports coat hung limply over one arm. An enormous black sombrero ornamented with silver topped the somewhat stocky figure, and loose, sandal-like guaraches covered his feet.

"Barry, I'm seeing things," said Margaret, aghast. She rubbed her eyes. "Do you see it too?"

Before I could answer, Rogers remarked, "Has he but the one shirt, or do we see him only when it's fresh back from the laundry?"

At that moment the figure turned. Margaret exclaimed, "Why, Mr. Rumble!"

"Hello, folks!"

"Did Elsa come with you?" asked Rogers.

"Sure, Hunt. Elsa and Chesbro and me. In his airplane. Chesbro piloted us down. We were setting around over there at Chesbro's ranch in San Fernando Valley night before last when he gets a telegram from down here saying he's needed. Some sort of business about his mine. You know Elsa. "Take Later that evening, Sam Chatfield said: "Hollywood? Yes, I enjoyed it the last time I was there, but I like this better. Berta is a child in some things, the same loves and hates of a child, the quick resentments of injury whether fancied or real. He was speaking to Hutton Rogers and me in the seclusion of a small book-lined study which opened off the living room. Berta was entertaining the others in the huge high-ceilinged living room.

"You were in California at the time your sister died, were you not? At the funeral, I mean?" asked Rogers casually.

A remarkable change came over Sam Chatfield's face, his whole manner was transformed. From a serene, quiet-spoken man of middle years, who talked calmly of the Mexican life that surrounded him, he went to extremes of loquacity, leaning forward in his chair, points of light glowing in the depths of his gray eyes—the same eyes that Elsa had.

"Yes. Yes, we were there, Berta and I. We were there before the funeral, before Kitty died, in fact. We were at the house that night. Slept there, and next morning—she was found dead."

Rogers shook his head slowly. "It must have been a shock to you, sir," he remarked.

"Shock? Of course. It was very awkward, also. We were not supposed to be stopping with my sister. In Pasadena."

"You say—awkward?"

"Yes, Mr. Rogers. My sister would not recognize Berta, my wife. Imagine that! My sister with ideas like that! And Berta—you see around you, gentlemen, what Berta is used to from childhood. She was educated in Paris. She is not an inferior, as my sister stubbornly chose to believe. It was that fact which made for the awkwardness. I kept it from her as long as I could—Kitty's attitude toward her. On our yearly trips to Los Angeles since Berta and I were first married, Kitty would send word that she was away, or that she was ill and could not see anyone. Berta was puzzled; she did not understand.

"But this last time—I mean the time Kitty died—I could no longer pretend to Berta, and so I telephoned from the hotel after dinner. I said that we would be over to see her, to make a call. But after I hung up Berta said: 'No. We take our luggage. We stay at least one night with your sister.' You see, she realized the situation in spite of my effort to keep it from her. She was determined to force the issue."

Sam Chatfield ceased talking and sat back in his chair. After more than a year the subject still agitated him; his face was flushed under its tan.

"What happened?" Rogers prodded gently.

For a moment Sam Chatfield held his silence. "You see, gentlemen, Elsa has told me about you—your interest in my sister's death. I am being very frank with you; I hope I am helpful."

"I'm sure you would be," said Rogers.

"That's why I say it was very awkward for me—and Berta. That's why I hurried back to Mazatlan after the funeral. That last night of her life there was a very disgraceful scene. My sister insulted Berta. And me."

"You didn't go back to your hotel?"

"No. Berta—" He smiled now with amusement at the recollection. "Berta can be very stubborn, most attractively stubborn. She puts her little foot down and she said: 'No, Sam. We stay one night as her guest. But no more.' She was angry. You've not seen how angry a Mexican can get—especially Berta. Her brother, now dead, killed a man for less than what my sister said that night to Berta.

ble's remarkable costume, then she leaped out and flung her arms around Margaret. She had a kiss for me and a warm handshake for Rogers. "I'm so glad," she said. "And now, Margaret—and the rest of you too—Papa and Berta are expecting you all out to dinner tonight at the rancho. Jimmy and Reed are coming too, I think. If they get back from the mine in time."

At eight-thirty that night the huge studded doors of the old rancho house at the edge of town swung back to let Hutton Rogers and me inside. The house was a relic of other more spacious days before time and revolution had reduced the acreage of the rancho. The others of the party had preceded us, and we found them all gathered in a huge room filled with ancient black walnut furniture marvelously carved. Sam Chatfield and Berta, whom we had met that February evening at the beach club, greeted us with enthusiasm. That night in California Berta had been restrained, confined by strange conventions, unresponsive; this evening she was free of those, at home in her native land, and in the house where her family for several generations before her had lived.

"Most welcome, senores," she said with a marvelous smile and a small soft hand extended impulsively. "I am happy to have you with us."

"Hollywood? Yes, I enjoyed it the last time I was there, but I like this better. Berta is a child in some things, the same loves and hates of a child, the quick resentments of injury whether fancied or real. He was speaking to Hutton Rogers and me in the seclusion of a small book-lined study which opened off the living room. Berta was entertaining the others in the huge high-ceilinged living room.

"You were in California at the time your sister died, were you not? At the funeral, I mean?" asked Rogers casually.

A remarkable change came over Sam Chatfield's face, his whole manner was transformed. From a serene, quiet-spoken man of middle years, who talked calmly of the Mexican life that surrounded him, he went to extremes of loquacity, leaning forward in his chair, points of light glowing in the depths of his gray eyes—the same eyes that Elsa had.

"Yes. Yes, we were there, Berta and I. We were there before the funeral, before Kitty died, in fact. We were at the house that night. Slept there, and next morning—she was found dead."

Rogers shook his head slowly. "It must have been a shock to you, sir," he remarked.

"Shock? Of course. It was very awkward, also. We were not supposed to be stopping with my sister. In Pasadena."

"You say—awkward?"

"Yes, Mr. Rogers. My sister would not recognize Berta, my wife. Imagine that! My sister with ideas like that! And Berta—you see around you, gentlemen, what Berta is used to from childhood. She was educated in Paris. She is not an inferior, as my sister stubbornly chose to believe. It was that fact which made for the awkwardness. I kept it from her as long as I could—Kitty's attitude toward her. On our yearly trips to Los Angeles since Berta and I were first married, Kitty would send word that she was away, or that she was ill and could not see anyone. Berta was puzzled; she did not understand.

"But this last time—I mean the time Kitty died—I could no longer pretend to Berta, and so I telephoned from the hotel after dinner. I said that we would be over to see her, to make a call. But after I hung up Berta said: 'No. We take our luggage. We stay at least one night with your sister.' You see, she realized the situation in spite of my effort to keep it from her. She was determined to force the issue."

Sam Chatfield ceased talking and sat back in his chair. After more than a year the subject still agitated him; his face was flushed under its tan.

"What happened?" Rogers prodded gently.

For a moment Sam Chatfield held his silence. "You see, gentlemen, Elsa has told me about you—your interest in my sister's death. I am being very frank with you; I hope I am helpful."

"I'm sure you would be," said Rogers.

"That's why I say it was very awkward for me—and Berta. That's why I hurried back to Mazatlan after the funeral. That last night of her life there was a very disgraceful scene. My sister insulted Berta. And me."

"You didn't go back to your hotel?"

"No. Berta—" He smiled now with amusement at the recollection. "Berta can be very stubborn, most attractively stubborn. She puts her little foot down and she said: 'No, Sam. We stay one night as her guest. But no more.' She was angry. You've not seen how angry a Mexican can get—especially Berta. HONORING OUR PARENTS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:48-51; Mark 7:6-13; John 19:25-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right.—Ephesians 6:1.

Right relations between children and parents have much to do with the peace and prosperity of a community and a nation. Experience has demonstrated that to be true, but even more basic is the fact that it is in accord with the promise of God.

One of the bad breakdowns in modern life is that of proper honor and obedience to parents by children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The need for our lesson of today is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and boss-ridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which we all receive its truth.

I. The Command and Promise (Exod. 20:12).

We are told by Paul that this is the "first commandment with promise" (Eph. 6:1-3). The Lord was not making a bargain with man, or seeking to draw out obedience by a prize, but there is obviously a great reward in the observing of this commandment.

Then, too, as the children of God (if we are such) through Jesus Christ, the first and most important consideration to come before us is, What is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relation between parents and children? His words are plain—we are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three outstanding elements are respect, obedience, and affection.

Our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Saviour and then the Example of believers, presents a beautiful pattern of true obedience to this commandment.

II. Willing Obedience (Luke 2:48-51; John 19:25-27).

The fact that Jesus was God manifest in the flesh only enhanced His conduct. He who is divine presents an example of obedience and consideration both as boy and man which we do well to emulate.

1. As a Boy (Luke 2:48-51). The boy Jesus, increasing "in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man" (v. 52), had come to His twelfth year and with His parents had gone up to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover.

There moved in His heart the conviction that He must now be about His Father's business—an altogether proper and commendable purpose, but one which resulted for the moment in separation from His parents. This was far more serious than a physical separation, for we read that they did not understand Him (v. 50).

Tragic indeed are the consequences of our failure to understand our children. Notice, however, that Jesus did not withdraw Himself from their watchful care, nor refuse to obey them even though they failed to understand Him. Equally tragic are the results of hasty and bitter separations brought about by the disobedience of children.

2. As a Man (John 19:25-27). The value of our lesson will be greatly reduced if we see only the responsibility of children while they are young. We are the children of our parents as long as we and they live.

One marvels at the carelessness and hardness of heart that will permit men and women who have time and money for everything else, to neglect their aged parents and even shunt them off into a public institution for care.

III. Hypocritical Disobedience (Mark 7:6-13).

Such an important commandment naturally held a high place in the thinking of the community. To violate it involved a measure of shame which men sought to avoid. So the Jews of Christ's day devised a scheme which made it possible for a man to appear to be very religious even as he deprived his parents of the honor and help to which they were entitled by the law of God.

The man who was so avaricious that he did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could entirely evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban," that is, dedicated by a vow to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing.

Thus do men make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13) through their traditions. The method differs but the spirit persists even in our day.

Somewhere in England
Sept. 7, 1943

Dear Friends:

I guess its about time I'm dropping you a line to let you know that I'm in England. I haven't been here very long yet but think that I will like it here quite well. The country here is quite similar to the country back there and is very much as it is always pictured to be.

I am at an Air base here which is about all I can say as to where I am at and what I am doing. And I hope to meet some boys from Tinley there. Are there any of them in England?

I received the cigarettes quite some time ago while I was still in Minnesota and wish to thank you for them very much.

I wish to say hello to all my friends in Tinley or wherever they may be. Will sign off for now.

Sincerely yours,
Cpl. Fred Meyer, 36042261, 1256 M P Co. APO 635, care postmaster, New York.

Dear Friends:

I have received the package you sent me and want to thank you very much for it. It is something which we can always use. I am going aboard my ship which will take about 2 months. After that we will probably join the Fleet.

I want to thank you again for the gift and hope I may be home to see you all again soon.

Sincerely yours,
Warren Uthe, USS Owen D. D. 536, Fleet post office, San Francisco, Cal.

Sept. 16, 1943

Dear Friends:

I received your package and was very glad to get it. The kit has really come in handy.

We have only a few weeks of basic training left and we don't know what they are going to do with our outfit after that. The Tinley Park Times has been coming regularly. It's sure well to be able to keep up with the town news. I hope you're all well, and thanks again for the kit and newspaper.

Sincerely,
Pvt. James Zimmerman, Co. C,
430 Med. Amb. Bn. Fort Ord, Cal.

Sept. 18, 1943

Dear Friends:

I think its about time I wrote to a lot of swell and deserving friends, whom I haven't written for quite sometime. But I guess I am like the other fellows in the service as their time isn't their own either. For about the last month and a half I have been doing a lot of traveling and this makes the fourth camp I have been to in that time. When I'm not traveling my time is devoted to flying. Often we have to fly 10 and 12 hours a day and I take advantage of all the bunk time I can get when day is done. I have been getting the Tinley Times regularly but some times it takes a couple of weeks, as it takes that much time to locate me. Regardless of the time it takes to reach me it is always appreciated. I think I will be leaving this camp very soon and when I reach my next base I am supposed to get a furlough. Here's hoping I see all of you folks then and I want to thank you for all you folks are doing for us fellows in the service.

I remain your friend,
Sgt. Harold C. Berg, 455 Bomb Group, 743 Bomb Sq. (H), Army Air Base, Salt Lake City, Utah.

For the first time since the fat salvage program was inaugurated in July 1942 monthly collection figures have declined slightly for two consecutive months. This indicates that there are not sufficient numbers of new participants being brought into the program each day, week and month. A recent OWI survey, showed that only 52 percent of the housewives in the country were saving and turning in fats. A plea for more used and waste fats comes from the salvage committee of the Illinois War Council. Mrs. Herbert P. Folkers is the local chairman for the Women Consumers Committee and asks the cooperation of all housewives in salvaging grease. As little as a tablespoon a day saves a pound a month, and will provide much needed glycerine for munitions and medicines. This glycerine is lost to war needs in home soap making since there are no facilities in the home to recover glycerine. Strain waste fats into any clean tin can without jagged edges and take a pound or more to any meat dealer who will pay the established price for your valuable contribution. Both the Folkers Market and Balchowsky stores will accept fats. Any member of the Victory club will call for cans of fat if notified.

Mrs. Edwin Bettenhausen was hostess to members of the WSCS of the Green Garden Methodist church in her home Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Edwin Drale presided and devotions were led by Mrs. Mary Krapf. Where our WSCS Dollar Goes, was the subject of the topic led by Mrs. Adolph Ullrich and Mrs. Fred Bettenhausen. Mrs. Wendell Morrison was in charge of recreation. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Elmer Bettenhausen will entertain the group at her home November 10.

Sunday school officers will be elected following the Fellowship Supper given for the benefit of the Green Garden Methodist Sunday school at the church Friday evening, Oct. 22 at 7:30 o'clock.

A Halloween party was given at the home of Miss Lois Weitendorf with the following attending: Annette Kohlman, Lucille Topp, Betty and Faye Oetter, Shirley Weichbrodt, Kay Lambrecht, Charlene Folkers, Betty and Wilma Mark, Harriet Baade, Roberta Bickley, and Barbara Bennett and their sponsor Mrs. Raymond Hiroshige. Names were drawn for Secret Pals. Refreshments were served. Barbara Bennett will entertain the club at her home November 9.

High scores at pinocle were held by Mrs. Chas. Pfaff and Mrs. Adam Heisner when Mrs. Geo. Elsner entertained members of the Afternoon club at her home Thursday. A luncheon was served. The next hostess will be Mrs. Glenn Folkers Nov. 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sangmeister were hosts at a dinner party at their home Sunday at which the guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Walden Larson, celebrating their thirteenth wedding anniversary, and Mr. and Mrs. Bror Johnson of Joliet, celebrating their 14th wedding anniversary.

The following interesting letter was received by Mrs. Helen Dempsey from her son Russell, and she passes it to others thru the medium of The News-Bulletin:

Somewhere in Australia. 5 Sept. 1943.

Dear Mother:

Well, how are you folks this rainy day? It is really nasty right now, you see it has rained all day except for a couple of hours. I suppose you were thinking I had forgotten how to write because of the time between this letter and the last.

Well, a lot has happened since then. The most important one is the leaving of the good old U. S. A. There isn't much I can tell you about my trip across to Australia but I'll tell you a little about it. As for getting sea-sick, that is one thing I did not get—even though I was never on the ocean before and so far away from land. Wasn't much to do on the ship but sleep, play cards, read or play games. I didn't do anything on the whole trip in the line of detail but stand guard for four hours. I came with a few of the fellows I trained with so I didn't have to make new friends to chum with. On the trip we ran into a storm and it was really something. You often see pictures of ships in storms and the waves washing upon the deck, well I actually saw this and was in one. They really are tough things. It tossed the ship around as if it were a ball. The ocean really seemed calm after we passed the storm. Well, so much for my trip across the great Pacific ocean.

I finally have settled down for a while at least. I am doing the work I trained for, only all I do is type. I work with a master-sergeant and he is really a swell fellow. I go to work between 8 and 8:30 in the morning and have an hour to an hour and a half for lunch. Then I am through by 4 to 4:30, depending on what I am doing or have to finish. I have a grade A pass and can go just about as I please.

It really is odd over here in Australia because you find things so old-fashioned and so different from things back home. The music here is about a year older and the shows are the same if not older. If you go into the stores you find lots of American goods, in fact more than any other made goods including Australian. They talk a lot different and so many of their words mean different things than words of the same mean back there. About the hardest thing to get used to is the money over here. They use penny, 3-pence, 6-pence, shilling, florin and ½ lb. and other pound denominations in paper bills. All the money up to the ½ lb. note is in silver or other metal and all the paper bills are in ½, 1, 5, etc., denominations. You can buy many things over here much cheaper than you can at home. So much for Australia.

How is Paul and the Army getting along? Has he heard anything more about it? I am glad you had a good time on your vacation. You say Dorothy Wix has been asking about me well, you can tell her I am okay and will you ask her for her address and send it to me. Also find out what address I should use to write to the Humphrey girls. If you see any of the Ferguson people, tell them I will write to them soon, but with things as they were before it was hard to write even to you folks. I have been getting your mail, and also letters from Grandma and Peggy. I got your last letter dated Aug. 12 so far and also many old letters. I am glad Don has begun to like the Army although he is going to school and I hope he makes good in whatever he is studying to do or be. I am writing a letter to him tomorrow and wish him a happy birthday.

Well, I guess I'll stop for now and write a few letters to others in the family and some of my friends. So till later, Love, Russell.

P. S. My address is now: Pvt. Russell E. Carroll, A.S.N. 36646049, Hdq. Co., B.S.C., APO 923, Care Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.

Peter Has Partnership with God

The following interesting article on the famous Morning Star Mission of Peter McCarthy at Joliet appeared in the Prairie Farmer of Oct. 2nd:

Peter McCarthy of the Morning Star Mission, Will Co., Ill., may not be the man who lived by the side of the road, but he has spent 34 years of his life being a friend to man.

Peter is in his "Office"—the corner of a bank building in Joliet—from 14 to 16 hours a day. A fresh flower in his lapel, he jokes with the folks who pass by, always looking for the fellow who needs help. Any day a boy in uniform may come to Peter. He may want food, or a place to stay overnight, or bus fare to camp. He gets it. The police may call Peter and tell him they have a runaway boy, and ask if he will take care of him until his father calls for him. This is Peter McCarthy's business.

On the 25th anniversary of his partnership with God, Peter added up the things he'd done. He had furnished lodging to 75,000 people, given meals to 200,000 and clothing to 12,500. He had visited the courts and the jails 7,500 times, furnished relief to 2,500 families, paid 2,500 railroad fares. He helped more than 4,000 wayward boys and girls, and he believes that he has left a good impression of God in the hearts of more than 9,125 people.

He Helps Soldiers

Just the other day two soldiers came to Peter. They were on their way back to camp. They had had a ride as far as Joliet, but had no money to get to camp. Peter paid their bus fare, and gave them enough to provide meals until the end of their journey. About the same time he stretched out his hand to a small boy who had left his Iowa home to visit his brother, a marine, stationed near Chicago.

Transient labor headed for the north, or back south, come to Peter for gas money. And the police cooperate with him in protecting young people whose little escapades might be embarrassing if they had to stay in jail.

So life flows by this man by the side of the road. He has a sandwich in one hand and a Bible in the other. True. But Peter will give you the sandwich without forcing the Bible on you. He talks church to none.

Learns Compassion Long Ago

Peter McCarthy learned compassion a long time ago. That was when he was hungry, deserted and cold. He was helped by a man who believed in the eternal goodness of God—and God's willingness to help. In gratitude, Peter asked for a mission house so that he might help others who were hungry, cold and ragged. His opportunity came soon, and he knelt in the dust of the road with his lantern and promised he would never preach anything but the atoning blood of Christ, and never take up a collection. He has kept that promise.

The front of Peter's Morning Star Mission—named after Jesus in Revelations—is made of brick. Peter says people used to toss them through the window of his frame-front building. He saved them until there was enough for a solid front.

The walls of his meeting room are covered with pictures of men he befriended—some of them big names in today's news. He has framed letters from men and women who have penned their gratitude and friendship to him. And he has put up placards which voice his philosophy. And they carry a bit of the wit of this Irishman—who says he is the first one from the old sod to establish a mission.

"I'm the Rock, Christ Jesus. All other rocks are sham rocks," reads one length of cardboard.

Peter opens and closes his little morning service himself—you can take it or leave it—and very shortly after that you'll find him in his "office", fresh flower and all, grinning at the folks who pass.

Clearing the way for invasion

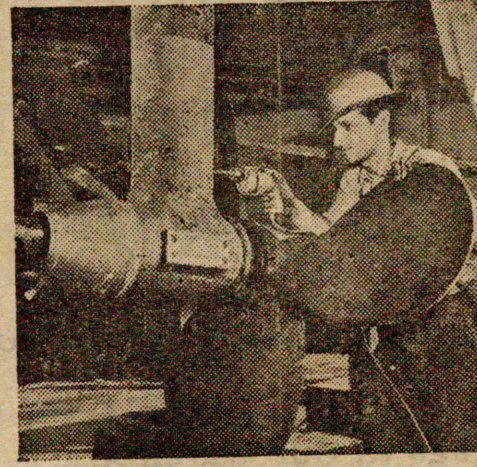

Before our invasion forces can make their landings, the lanes of approach must be swept clean of enemy mines. And this job is being done by the Navy men aboard minesweepers. To provide for the United Nations' invasion plans to date and those of the future, American ship builders have achieved mass construction of these minesweepers by drawing on the tremendous energy of Electric Power. Portable electric skill saws, drills, grinders and welders are all used in the cutting, shaping and fitting of these sturdy seafaring craft. Powerful electric cranes are employed to install the engines and lift aboard the heavy unit parts.

Yes, Electric Power speeds the construction of minesweepers just as it speeds the production of planes, tanks, guns and the hundreds of other implements that are turned out in Northern Illinois.

Electric Power Speeds War Production

While YMS 179 slips down the ways to join the Navy, Electric Power is speeding the completion of other minesweepers under construction.

Electrically operated drills make quick work of boring holes. Like the skill saws, these portable drills can be carried to wherever they are needed.

Portable Electric skill saws help to cut days from production schedules of minesweepers which are constructed almost entirely of wood.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

Aviation Cadet Bristol Lauffer is taking his pre-flight training at Maxwell Field, Ala.

Seaman 1st C. Jerry Bennett has been transferred to the west coast.

We received the following letter from Sgt. Chester Ebert who is stationed in Panama.

Dear Friends: I wish to express my thanks for the birthday gift I recently received. You are doing a fine job and I know that everyone of the boys appreciate your work. Not every one in the Army has the advantage of coming from a small community.

A soldier looks forward to the day to return home to a normal life and until that day, it is certainly up to the home front people to give their moral support to make the time seem shorter. The Womens Service Club is doing that and again my thanks and may you receive all the support you so justly deserve. Yours truly, Chester D. Ebert.

The Bankers held in to their one game lead as they won two games from the Robins. These two teams put on the best show of the night as both teams were shooting high scores.

Wes Cappel and Wally Meeks of the Bankers and Star Williams and Lloyd Warning of the Robins had over a 500 series a piece. The V-Eighters had an easy night as they swept three games from the Paperhangers as the whole Paperhanger team were off form. By winning 3 games, the Cooper & Hostert team took possession of second place.

The Primary Room had many absences the past two weeks due to colds. We hope the boys and girls are on the road to recovery and will be back with us soon.

Pupils in the second and third grade who have consecutive perfect units in spelling receive small American flags to paste on the covers of their Spellers. Pupils who received their first flags are Ronald Bruggeman, Phyllis Gaddis, Esther Holm, Jean Cooper, Rita Werner, Paul Kessler, Dolores Cooper, Mary Cooney, Frederick Rauch, Diana Wondrasek and Betty Colclasure.

The pupils in grades 4, 5 and 6, who have had five consecutive perfect units in spelling received small American flags to paste in their Spellers. Twenty received them.

The aim of the pupils of grade four in Arithmetic is to learn their tables. A diagram of a stairs was drawn on the board. Each child tries to go up and down the stairs, saying their tables without a mischance. Thus far the following pupils have a perfect score in the three tables: Jo Ann Reuckert, Audrey Neithammer, Joyce Schiek, Corinne Wondrasek, Elizabeth Lumpkin, Merlyn Larson, Patricia McGinnis, Russell Geuther, David Gode, Joyce Werner, Billy Bradley and James Bradley.

A Brownie Meeting was held Wednesday, October 13 after school in the Intermediate class room. Officers for the coming year were elected. Patsy Steele, Treasurer, Anita Geuther, Secretary, Audrey Neithammer Chairman.

The secret motto was also selected. Plans were made for a hike in the near future and a Halloween party.

A Literary Society is being arranged in the Junior High school room for the purpose of following Parliamentary rules and the first program will consist of Book Reports to observe American Education week Nov. 7 to 13.

Scout Troop No. 1 registered this Fall with 14 members. Our meetings will consist of a forty-five minute period of recreation followed by a forty five minute period of work with the Junior Red Cross of which Miss Dorothy Johnson is Chairman.

At present they are working on portfolios and later will make bed jackets and Thanksgiving tray covers for men in our naval and Military hospitals.

WERE the old timers in football a bit tougher than the modern crowd when it comes to durability? It might be. On Yale's 1889 team, Pudge Heffelfinger was still playing good football at the age of 65. He starred in a pro game for 58 minutes at the age of 53.

A few nights ago Wayne Johnson gave a small dinner to another old timer by the name of Shep Homans. Shep Homans was Snake Ames' substitute at Princeton in 1889. Shep never got to play a minute that year.

In 1890 and 1891, Homans, weighing 165 pounds, never gave his substitute a chance to get in any game. Shep played the full 90 minutes for two successive years as the Tigers' fullback.

How good was Homans? Well, he made Walter Camp's All-America both seasons.

At the age of 71, he is still just warming up as far as durability goes; although he has cut down his golfing pace to 36 holes a day.

There was one big difference. In those days Yale, Harvard, and Princeton only had two hard games a year—in their own circle. Today seven or eight tough games is a general average.

Winning Sires

The conversation among the horse-men at Belmont switched to the ages of winning sires recently.

Some one brought up the point that The Porter, at the age of 23, still had a winning colt in Alortor who recently snipped off a rich stake.

Also that The Porter had a grandson running by the name of Dart-away who had worked out a mile in 1:34.4/5.

There is Man o' War still producing winning colts and Big Red is now 26 years old.

Kingston at the age of 26 was the proud father of the star entry Novelty.

By this time the autumn air at Belmont was replete with debates concerning the age where sires turned out their best colts.

John Partridge, with more than 40 years experience to back him up in the training game, named the winning average between 8 and 15.

Ben Jones and Maxie Hirsch disagreed slightly.

"It might be from 6 to 24," Ben Jones said. "Nobody can tell. Man o' War, who is over 26, might yet give the racing game a son or daughter who would be hard to beat."

"Why don't they say something about the greatest dams?" John Partridge asked.

"What about them?" I put in.

"It's an entirely different proposition," Partridge said. "I'll tell you a story about that. I've always believed that fast, winning mares seldom produced a winning offspring. I'd rather have the strong, sturdy type that haven't run too much—or too fast."

"Now here's the story. Years ago I had to make a trip to the famous Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., for a check up.

"Dr. Mayo kept me there for two months. All we talked about was horses. I gave him my idea about the best type of mares. He agreed with me.

"It's just the same," he said, 'on the human side. With few exceptions, athletic women seldom produce champions in sport. It is a matter of being over-muscled and also the exhaustion of energy in training and competition.'

The Check-Up

The final checkup shows that John Partridge and Dr. Mayo are right. May Sutton Bundy's daughter was a good tennis player, but not a champion.

At the moment I can't recall a woman star in sport who had either a son or a daughter in the upper brackets of competition. There must be a few. But their names escape me. There was certainly no athletic prominence attached to the mothers of Babe Ruth, Jim Thorpe, Ty Cobb, Bobby Jones, Helen Wills, Patty Berg, Babe Didrikson, Bronko Nagurski, Glenna Collett, Joe Louis, Gene Tunney and many others known to headline fame.

There have been a few exceptions on the male side—but not many.

Ty Cobb had no son interested in either baseball or football. Practically none of the top stars of today had mothers or fathers who were even close to being champions.

As a great competitor, Man o' War still has the record when it comes to producing winning progeny.

To keep the argument moving along on the human side I can't recall, outside of Jake Schaefer Sr. and Jr. in billiards, where any combination of father and son, father and daughter, mother and son or mother and daughter were both champions.

DEBATE concerning the selection of any all-time football team is a never-ending affair. It is extremely unlikely that any two followers of the game would choose the same eleven men as their favorites.

In the backfield alone it's almost impossible to pick out any four men from the following group—Bronko Nagurski, Red Grange, Jim Thorpe, Cliff Battles, Dutch Clark, Sammy Baugh, Ernie Nevers and Ace Parker. And there are others that deserve mention. The list of great linemen is just as endless.

Most fans would pick Nagurski on any all-time team. Thorpe is another player that immediately springs to mind. Both of them proved their unquestionable fitness to occupy a niche in football's hall of fame. Their records are well known.

There are others who are, for one reason or another, less widely known to today's sports followers. Ken Strong is one, Pudge Heffelfinger is another. Both have had considerable publicity, especially the latter, but neither gets as much space in the record books.

About Ken Strong

Big Steve Owen of the New York Giants believes that no all-time team is complete without Ken Strong. As a sophomore at New York university under Chick Meehan, Strong was one of the best blocking backs of all time. He weighed 205 pounds and was speedier than most 170-pound backs.

Later on he was switched to a ball carrier and passer. According to Owen, "he was one of the best ball carriers I ever saw, college and pro. He was one of the best college or pro passers in the game. He was one of the three best kickers pro football ever knew. . . . There was no position in the backfield where he wasn't an outstanding star. I don't mean good. I mean great."

When N.Y.U. defeated a strong Carnegie Tech team—which already had whipped a powerful Notre Dame squad—Judge Walter Steffens, Tech coach, said:

"I would never have believed that one man could wreck the team I had on the field today. He (Strong) ran over them and around them. He hit 225 pound Karcis so hard I was afraid he had killed him. He is the best ball carrier I ever saw—one of the best passers I ever saw—as good a blocker as I ever saw—and certainly the best kicker I ever saw—including Jim Thorpe."

Strong lacked only one thing—the color which causes athletes to grab—and keep—the spotlight. But he had everything else.

Pudge Heffelfinger

Heffelfinger is better known to the older generation, and with good reason. Pudge was named All-America guard on Walter Camp's first team in 1889. The fact that a large smattering of present day gridiron followers are familiar with his record is evidence of his greatness.

Nagurski's present comeback recalls tales of Heffelfinger's amazing durability and stamina. At the age of 44 he went back to see how Yale was getting along. He came close to ruining the Yale line, which was one of the best.

Nine years later, when he was 53, Pudge played 53 minutes in a professional game at Columbus. Bo McMillin, then 22 years old, was his quarterback.

As remarkable a thing of its kind as the sports world has seen was Pudge's activity at the age of 65. He played through a 15-minute period in another pro game for charity, and the men who played against him declared he was still a good football player.

So Nagurski's comeback isn't so miraculous, even though he had been out of football for the past six years.

SPORTS SHORTS

Georgia Tech once offered a football scholarship to Martin Marion, rangy shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jimmy Thomson, golf's long hitter, has lost 18 pounds since joining the coast guard.

Jockey Ted Atkinson rode in 1,200 races in 1942.

Fred Kelly, winner of the high hurdle championship in the Olympic games of 1912, has logged 17,500 flight hours as an army transport pilot.

Sick Hens Won't Lay, So Watch for Diseases

Fowl Pox, Colds Most Frequent Ailments

Diseases among your hens may be causing lowered egg production and unnecessary deaths. One of the most common is fowl pox, says Successful Farming magazine. This ailment spreads slowly but surely. Be on the lookout for the appearance of small, straw-colored or brown, wart-like scabs which may appear on the comb or wattles, or around the eyes and at the corners of the mouth.

It is not too late to vaccinate the flock if the disease is diagnosed by someone well experienced in the

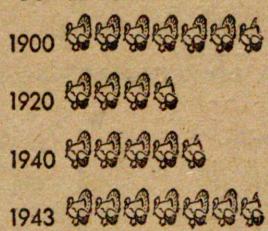

TELEFACT

CHICKENS IN THE U. S. A.

U. S. TURKEY FLOCK MAKES COMEBACK

Each symbol represents one million turkeys.

There are now four chickens for every person in the United States while back in 1900 there were only three. Since there are now about 135,000,000 people in the country, there are some 540,000,000 chickens on farms.

Turkeys, too, have been increasing, after a long decline between 1900 and 1920. There are now around 6,600,000 of the big birds on the nation's farms, just about as many as there were at the turn of the century.

control of fowl pox if it has not gone too far.

Inspect your flock at monthly intervals for those profit robbers, lice. The simplest method of freeing the birds from such parasites is to paint a reliable nicotine preparation on the roosts about a half hour before roosting time. Then be certain all the birds are on the roosts, because if a few lice escape the entire flock will become reinfested.

The greatest losses from infectious colds are loss of body weight and egg production. If the disease occurs, you may first notice that a few birds remain on the roosts most of the day or particularly in the afternoon when grain is hand-fed. The infected individuals should be removed from the flock if possible. Check the litter and if it is too wet remove it and add a deep, dry litter.

If it is only damp add about an inch of dry litter to the top of it and stir it every few days. Do everything possible to keep the birds eating at top pitch. The use of a moist mash at noon, or the feeding of mash pellets will help.

In the absence of an outbreak of a serious infectious disease, it is unnecessary to change litter every two weeks or two months. Instead, with a good start of highly absorbent litter three inches deep, add about an inch of new litter at frequent intervals until the litter is at least six inches deep by December 1.

Either keep the litter stirred or feed grain in the litter so that the birds stir it sufficiently. This built-up litter is one guarantee against unnecessarily cold floors which cause lowered egg production.

Cull the birds frequently and regularly. This practice conserves critical feedstuffs, provides more floor space per bird, tends to lower mortality, and raises percentage of egg production. Take out the birds which aren't contributing their share to your pocketbook and the war effort.

The best method to conserve fowl paralysis is to remove any lame birds and those with gray eyes (providing the pupils are irregular in outline).

If disease occurs, act promptly and get an accurate diagnosis. Be certain that casualties are promptly disposed of by burning them, or burying deep enough so that dogs cannot dig them up.

Plant Cover Crops

Vegetable growers will find the fall a favorable time to sow cover crops, either after an early market crop has been removed or just before the last cultivation of a late market crop. H. R. Cox, extension agronomist at Rutgers university, says:

Being a nitrogen gatherer, hairy vetch is one of the best of the winter cover crops. It will return to the soil, when plowed down next spring, the equivalent of several hundred pounds per acre of nitrate of soda.

Washington, D. C.

BRITAIN VS. RUSSIA

One thing which distressed the Flying Senators on their round-the-world inspection was the intense rivalry between the British and Russians in the Near East.

The senators reported that around the Gulf of Persia, where the Russians take delivery on U. S. lend-lease airplanes, the British local commander at first refused to let the Russians set up a local lend-lease receiving agency. The Gulf of Persia long has been coveted by land-locked Russia as a means of reaching the sea. British opposition presumably was based on this.

Finally the British government in London ruled that the Russians could send an airplane mission to the Gulf of Persia, but even then the local British commander, according to the senators, delayed and tried to block the plan.

Now, however, the Russians are established at the head of the Gulf and work in close co-operation with U. S. officials. To save manpower, the U. S. army uses skinned natives to assemble airplanes under the supervision of sergeants and doughboys. Then the planes are turned over to the Russians for inspection. In test flights, the Russians cruise all over the Gulf of Persia area, obviously have ample opportunity to map out the terrain.

The Russian base is commanded by a live-wire young general who gets along well with the Americans but is eyed with some suspicion by the British.

The senators also reported that when the British were a bit starchy about letting the Russians use the airport at Teheran, capital of Iran, farther north, the Russian army sent in a regiment one night and, without further argument, took over the airport. Since then the British have had to ask the Russians for permission to use it.

These are a few of the delicate problems facing the Allies in this suspicious, balance-of-power section of the Near East, where, according to the senators, the chief topic of conversation is the political tug-of-war between Russia and Britain.

PATRIOTIC U. S. HENS

The hens of America are really doing all right by Uncle Sam. Their war effort is producing more eggs than the country has ever seen. Though we are sending 10 billion eggs overseas, 50 billion more remain for our frying pans.

This total of 60 billion eggs is an all-time high. Even the domestic 50 billion is an all-time high. Passed around to every man, woman and child, it means 346 eggs apiece for the year, or about one a day. This is a lot better than the average.

At the moment, eggs are "tight" in the market, because this is the moulting season, when laying always falls off. But eggs will increase again when the hens resume full-time production, also when the egg-drying business falls off.

This is a new and unexpected turn of events. The tremendously expanded egg-drying business was expected to take a full 20 per cent of our egg crop, but now the estimates are dropping fast. Reason is the British and Russians, after two years of dried egg diet, are getting tired of them. They are politely telling the combined food board and lend lease, "Don't pass those dried eggs around any more."

The dried egg business used a modest 10 million pounds before the war, mostly for cake flour and confectionery purposes. But the submarines have made shipping space so tight that space is not available for shell eggs, and the dried egg business has shot up to a capacity of about 400 million pounds.

Some of this capacity is now idle, because of Allied distaste for the product, so more fresh eggs will come onto the U. S. market.

ARMY ADVISES HOUSEWIVES

The quartermaster corps feeds so many thousands of mothers' sons that it now dares to tell those mothers how to prepare a roast of beef.

Experiments in army camps show that if you cook a roast at relatively low temperatures, you will have 20 per cent more roast at the end. Cooking at high temperatures shrinks the meat, and dries up the juices.

According to QMC, the desirable range of temperature is 315 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Cooking an eight pound roast at this temperature will require 4 hours and 10 minutes.

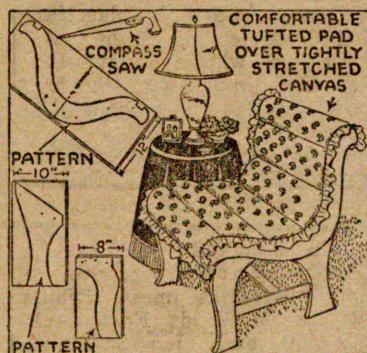

In other words, it takes more time than at a higher temperature (at 400 degrees, it takes only 3 hours), but you save the juices, save vitamins, and will have more roast to slice.

WAR CHAFF

Officials estimate that if Russia gets out of the war, Germany will be able to double or triple the number of fighter planes which now oppose Allied bombers from England.

Allied Flying Fortress pilots are not big six-footers, but little fellows who have to stuff a cushion behind themselves in the driver's seat.

Experts who know Italy say there are 1,400 railroad bridges in that country, destruction of which from the air would cripple German troop movements completely.

THE war is bringing many changes in the things we use and the things we do. Women as well as men are learning to handle tools. If a chair is lacking we make one. If we cannot have springs we find a way to make it comfortable anyway. That is the spirit of the times.

Perhaps you have made lawn chairs all with straight cuts of the hand saw. Have you ever stopped to realize that it is almost as easy to cut curves with a compass saw? Curves add comfort as well as beauty and a tufted cushion distributes the weight so that springs are not missed so much. The

Followed Instructions

Rapping his baton sharply on his music-stand, the conductor of the very amateur orchestra glared round. Then he fixed his eye on the cornet-player.

"Here, you! Why on earth did you leave off playing just as we came to the chorus?"

"Well," was the retort, "on my music it says 'Refrain'; so I did."

Schoolboy—You'll have to buck up, Dad, we got only 40 out of a hundred for last night's homework.

Hubby—Darling do you realize that if you knew how to cook we'd save money?

Wife—Yes, dear; and if you knew how to save money we would keep a cook.

Put Her at Ease

A snob wrote saying that she hoped the schoolmaster was very particular about the class of boys allowed into the school.

He replied: "Dear Madam, so long as your son's fees are paid promptly, there will be no question as to his antecedents."

If you know a Navy man, don't ever call him a "gob"—sailors consider the name an insult. You can get on the right side of him though if you offer him a Camel—or better yet, send him a carton. Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy (Army, Marines, Coast Guard, too, for that matter) based on actual sales records from the service men's stores. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

curved pieces of the charming chair sketched here are shown at the left. You can see how easy they are to cut out of odds and ends of one-inch lumber that you may have on hand. The reinforcing pieces are all straight cuts.

MOTHER-IN-LAW CHEERS LONG SOUGHT RELIEF!

Had Been "Irregular" for Years!

Have you often despaired of ever finding normal regularity? Then, by all means, read this unsolicited letter:

"For many long years, my mother-in-law had suffered from common constipation. She used to take all kinds of pills and medicines, but got no lasting relief. Upon starting to use KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, her trouble cleared up. She feels like a new person, she says. She wanted me to tell the world how your product helped her." Mrs. Poline Balis, 734 East 160th Street, Bronx, N. Y.

How do scientists explain the apparent "magic" of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN's relief? Simply this: ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of "cellulose" elements — lack of which in sufficient amounts in the diet is a common cause of constipation! These elements help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN doesn't work by "purging"—or by "sweeping you out." It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water! See if you don't find the welcome relief you've hoped for! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

'Dusting' Gold Coins Was Racket in the Early Days

Because gold as it comes from the mines is somewhat soft, it was not at all uncommon for gold coins or nuggets of the early days to wear down in actual value. "Dusting gold" also became a racket. In Chinatown, San Francisco, elderly Chinese men with infinite patience sat by days shaking sacks of gold coins over a pan. Gold dust rubbed off on sacks and filtered through, and this was salvaged for resale at the mints. Coins were then passed on at their full marked value. Today hardening alloys are added to gold.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

South America supplied 65 per cent of the world's rubber needs in 1890, while in 1922 only about 6 per cent came from that section. Far East plantation development accounts for the drop in the demand for Amazon Valley rubber.

Synthetic rubber is defined as a man-made combination of molecules that form a substance having the chief characteristics of crude rubber.

In 1938 the total of American-controlled rubber plantations was about 260,000 acres, mostly in the Far East. These plantations produced 40,000 tons annually, or about 8 per cent of U. S. imports.

FOOD DISTRIBUTION ORDER IS AMENDED SPOTLIGHT IS ON IRISH POTATOES

The War Food Administration recently amended Food Distribution Order No. 13, which prohibited the sale of cream containing more than 19 percent butterfat, to cover all sellers of cream, including producer distributors delivering less than one gallon a day, according to the Will County Health Department. These distributors were exempt from the provisions of the original order.

In line with the order, pasteurization plants discontinued the sale of whipping cream in November, 1942. The purpose of the whipping cream ban is to direct milk into channels where it can be properly allocated for war lend-lease and civilian needs, and the practice of going to farmers to purchase cream tends to defeat the purpose of this ban.

R. H. Baron, County Milk Sanitarian, also points out that more than patriotism is involved in buying raw cream. "Bacteria cling to the fat globule," he said, "and as a result, cream has a higher bacteria content than milk. This means that if the raw cream is infected, with undulant fever germs for example, there is more danger of the consumer becoming ill from using the cream than from the use of milk."

"Now that the Government restricts the sale of heavy cream even by producer-distributors, it is healthful, as well as patriotic to avoid patronizing any possible 'black market' in raw whipping cream," Mr. Baron said.

The spotlight at the vegetable markets is on Irish potatoes, they are the Victory Food selection from Oct. 21 through Nov. 6. That means potatoes are in abundant supply right now and belong on the menu every day. The government is also asking the cooperation of homemakers in storing potatoes for fall and winter use. There has

"We Are Buying War Bonds—Are You?"

Sgt. Carl Funk, 26, Cincinnati, lost his right eye and sustained a fractured left knee in Sicily. He has been buying War Bonds regularly. He will return to civil life as soon as he is discharged from Halloran Hospital, N. Y.

Pvt. Irwin Levinson, Baltimore, was struck by shrapnel in the left shoulder at Palermo. The fingers of his left hand are paralyzed. When his father asked if he needed anything, his son replied: "Buy War Bonds." His father bought $1,500 worth.

Pvt. Thomas Dellarossa, Trenton, N. J., 18th Infantry Patrol, was wounded by shrapnel at El Gultar, Africa, and now must wear a special brace for his left knee. He won the Purple Heart. He buys War Bonds regularly and urges you to.

Pvt. Donat Cartier, Derry, N. H., suffered a fracture of the leg above the knee in Sicily when struck by an 88 mm. shell. He was held prisoner for two days by the Germans, traveling in a tank. He is a regular purchaser of War Bonds.

Pvt. William E. Morris, Long Beach, Cal., is above draft age but has seen three years of service. He lost his left leg below the knee in Tunisia. He wears the Purple Heart and Good Conduct Ribbon and continues his War Bond purchases.

been a bumper potato crop this year, which has resulted in a crying need for storage space for all of these potatoes. All that is needed to store a few bushels is a cellar or garage, or any place where the temperature is between 40 and 60 degrees. Potatoes should be stored in a cool, dry place and covered so the light does not get at them. And they need ventilation—a few holes punched in the cover or paper over the potatoes will do the trick.

Lost and found columns of Tokio newspapers are crowded these days. Every time an American buys a War Bond, the Japs lose face. Buy your 10% every pay day.
